Passion mutates into procedures, into rules and roles. In stead of purpose, we focus on policies. Instead of being free to create, we impose constraints that squeeze the life out of us.'

A fear of foolishness keeps us from painting the pictures we would like to paint, composing the poems, courting the lovers, making the friends, pursuing the jobs, starting the businesses. Those who know this, can confront and transcend their fear of ridicule, are usually in a strong position... Every path breaker has looked foolish, and been humiliated, yet society depends on them utterly... Only those who are willing to risk looking foolish can invent a breakthrough.'

You cannot carry out fundamental changes without a certain amount of madness. In any case it comes from non-conformity, the courage to turn your back on the old formulas, the courage to invent the future. It took madmen of yesterday for us to be able to act with extreme clarity today. I want to be one of those madmen”
